

Abstract

A method provides a background sound effect for mobile phone communication through a carrier. An initial talking message such as a call-answering message by any of the two communication parties is firstly detected and a background sound effect is 5 selected in an audio memory module in the mobile phone. The background sound effect is sent to the carrier by a DSP unit. Therefore, the two communication parties can simultaneously hear the background sound effect.